The Female Form Divine.

The old type of beauty was the result of careful study of every line of the figure and not the careless one-sided development in vogue to-day. In designing human figures I have often been struck with the similarity to-day between men and women, so that it. is impossible to be true to models. The result is that artists and sculptors now have to_rely_more_on_their_creative faculty for no athletic girl could pose as Venus or Psyche. The models employed by artists in England, and especially in London, are not in any sense athletic. They are of a particlar type, and as they depart from that so does their chance of employment diminish." Well, it is all very sad, but we imagine that wilful woman, who always delights in having herown way, will not abandon her physical exercises, even though she sacrifices the highest ideals of Grack art in so doing.

It is, however, we fear, rather too much to expect that America. shall make this important waterway absolutely free to the commerce of the world and continue to bear the expense of maintenance. No reasonable objection can be offered to the imposition of moderate tolls, and seeing that thousands of miles will be saved to shipping by the opening of this new route, the imposition of reasonable charges would not do much to restrict traffic. If, howover, tolls are charged there can be no discrimination in favour of America ships if the United States Government has respect for its Treaty obligations; but in that event the agitation in favour of giving State subsidies to the mercantile marine will be considerably strongthened, as the case of those who advocate discrimination is that the Canal will be largely used by British and Japanese lines which are heavily subsidised, and that the American people in the utilisation of the water-way will be dependent, for the increase of their commerce at least, on such facilities as these shipowners "may voucheafe to

In The Mould. The definite pronouncement as to the adbication of the Throne invests the near future of China with a little more of certainty. There now seems to be no tangible obstacle remaining to the formstion of a generally recognised Republic, and if those relegated high places are only inspired with a true zeal and altruism, as nearly as possible forgetful of personal interest and ambition, the outlook 45 will assuredly be bright. There are several important directions in which the policy of the new administration must be jointly and resolutely guided. Perhaps the chief of them is education. It is those who are now the young men of China from whom their country must seek its salvation. It is necessary, therefore, that they should be adequately equipped to fulfil their great destiny, and it is only by education that such equipment may be supplied.

Early in the morning of Jan. 17 fire broke out in the woodwork department in the Moji Military arsenal. The flames spread to two adjoining factories, and all three buildings were destroyed, together with the [44] machinery. The cause of the fire remains unexplained.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

If the teletailies we publish torday are to be relied upon Japan is taking more self- interest than hitherto in connection with the unrest in China. With some of the more jingoistic papers at Tokyo the Government's determination to observe strict neutrality has been a cause for examplaint; and there has been an insistent demand in some quarters that Mr. Ijuin, the Japanese Minister at Peking, the fires were put out, Two man was found guilty of larceny terests to be jeopardized. Even in the Diet the suggestion was made that Japan should abandon an attitude, which, while it'might be eminently correct, was unproductive, and seek, by recognising the Republican Government, or by some other means, to profit from the political conditions existing in China. Those who gave this advice overlooked, or disregarded, the fact that Japan has entered into certain solemn engagements which debar her from exercising a free hand in international matters. It is true that an example of cynical disregard for treaty obligations was set by a certain European Power in the Balkans only some two years ago, an example which may, to some extent, have determined the fate of Kores, or at least hastened the less of that country's nationality, but for Japan to take independent action in regard-to-China-would be a much more bouring a girl,... serious matter.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Isle of Unrule, There is a painful possibility that we have coined a word in the title of this paragraph, in which event we can only submit ourselves with fortitude to the punishment that should follow an offence so inexcuseable. It is Mr. and Chang Chi who proposes an Isle. of Unrule. He has, according to petition to the Republican Government setting forth the beauties of anarchy and drawing attention to the fact that this beatific state of society has never been suffered to exist. He suggests that the Powers be asked to recognise Tsungming Island, at the month of the Yangtze, as neutral territory where no law nor order can be enforced, whither those who, feel the fine frenzy of anarchy burning within them, may repair and be just as anarchistic as they like. Mr. Chang believes, or rather hopes, that this experiment would This prove so successful that all the Republicans in China would be converted to his idea of nongovernment. It would be in order to ask if Mr. Chang has any worldly possessions other than a

It was once, and may be to-day for anything we know to the contrary, a favourite subject for argument whether the term 'ex-territoriality" or "extraterritoriality" should be used. We personally prefer the latter, though we admit that the preference is founded on caprice rather than upon consideration.

Exterritoriality.

The writer of those lines evidently preferred the shorter word, but he may have been influonced by the requirements of metre. What we set out to Bay and have managed to fail to say so far, was that extra-territoriality in China is probably doomed, however events go. Out of the present disorder a strong Government is certain to emerge sooner or later, and one of its first acts will assuredly be the adoption of a civil and criminal code and the There is a lot of fine British establishment of a competent sentiment behind the fashioning judiciary. The revolutionaries are strongthoning their positions, but we are not, and, in the event of our losing, the situstion will be worse for China and the glories of the Imporial family will be imperilled. Practically all China favours the younger Princes oppose it while the non-payment of the soldiers destroys the morale of the troops. After mature consideration we ask the Throne to issue an edict announcing the formation of a republic and appointing Yuan Shih-kai High Commissioner."

In official circles it is believed that the memorial is sincere and that it will be effective.

Meetings of the Princes and the Cabinet have been held today. An Edict has been issued, but not of any importance.

Three thousand more of Yuan Shill-kai's soldiers are arriving: No American Loan.

His visit to Shanghai has no business significance, he told "China Press" reporter yesterdoing in Peking," he said, "and I just came to Shanghai to take a look around."

Asked about the many persi tent reports of loan negotiations he said: "We have been approach. Both parties have asked for loans, if you call that negotiations, but both have refused. There will be no loans made until a recognized government has been established in China."

Referring to Poking he said the financial situation was very "The only available funds there," he explained, "is the gold in the Imperial Palace. This can be made to last for some time but how much more could be realized from this scurce, is question. Some say there is stil there is very little left.".

An Imperial Edict-The following Imperial Edict issued at Poking on Jan. 25, is intoresting, in that it shows that the Throne at that date had not made up its mind in regard to abdication :- Since the uprisings of the Wuhan districts we cannot bear to see the sufferings of the people and adopted the resolutions of the National Assembly and issues decrees and rescripts not to sup press internal disturbances, by mostly caused by military forces. Coal Market for 1911.

The following is Messrs. Hughes and Hough's report on the coal market for 1911:-

During the year under review 1.262.000 tons of coal reached the Colony from the various coal contres, the details of which are as follows:--

Japanese Coals.—Thoquantity imported amounted to 923,000 tons from Moji, Wakamatzu, Milke. Karatzu and Muroran. The chief importors are the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha, whose arrivals during the year totalled 606,000 one. Other importers of Japaneso ato :---

Tons. Mitsui Bishi Goshi 125,000 Kwaisha 40,000 Bradley & Co.....

40,000

and sundry others. Cardiff Coal.—Only one cargo of some 5,000 tons arrived to the consignment of commercial importers. There were several enquiries for coal on the Admiralty List during the latter part of the year, but no business resulted. Kaiping Coal.—There arrived about 37,000 tons for local dealers and for Canton consumption.

Fushun Coal.—The Mitsui Bus-Ban Kaisha imported some 50,000 tone during the year, the coal passing all to Chinese hands.

Lanchow Coal.—A trial shipment of 3,200 tons was made by a local firm, some of which was sold to Chinese.

Pulo Laut.—The import cion of this coal is increasing, the yearly arrivals amounting to 36,000 tons.

Haiphong Coal.—Some 16,000 tons - reached here during the year and was to Chinese consignment. Australian Coal.—No Australian Coal was commercially imported during the year.

Tsingtau Coal.—One shipment of this coal arrived in the early part of the year, none imported.

Formosa Coal.—The Mitsui Bussan Kaisha are introducing this coal into the market, and two consignments were received of China Providents 1.200 and 800 tons respectively. Dairy Farms A Problem in Underwriting. Groon Islands Curious points are constantly arising in connection with underwriting, and within the last month or two rather a novel question Houghong Ices has been exercising the minds of ·Hongkong Ropes those who do a large business in guaranteeing fresh issues. Occasionally it seems good in the eves of promoters, and others, to close subscription lists in advance of the actual date named on the prospectus, oven though the full amount has not been covered by the public. For reasons of policy, this is naturally desirable every now and then, and the result is, of course, to leave the underwriters with a certain amount of stock which, had the lists remained open until the last moment, they might possibly not have had to take. When a point like this arises, as it has done recently in two or three cases, there is not time to consult all the underwritors; but they have an aggrieved feeling if they are left with more stock than they expected. The problem is whether, in these circumstances, they are at liberty or not, to treat the underwriting agreement as invalid. Much depends, of course, upon the wording of the original letter signed by the underwriters. Most of these documents are framed in such a way that the underwritersagree to be bound by the terms of the prospectus; and if the latter states that the lists may be closed on or before a certain day, it is reasonably enough contended that those responfor the issue should londs received on Storage. have the right to close the Advances made on Merchandise. lists at such time as they think will be best for the present and (Rates and Particulars on application). future success of the venture, This appears to be the proper decision, but that it is open to dethate is manifest enough. An old Stock Exchange story may be recalled of a certain loan for £100,000, which showed very poor prospects indeed of success- UREEN_ISLAND_CEMENT ful appeal to the public, but was at length underwritten, after great difficulty. On the day that the lists opened there was one solitary application for $5,000, wherenpon the directors promptty closed the ! 's for fear, as the fable has it lest the applicant withdraw his subscription !
